The JD Edwards Upgrade

The objectives of an upgrade are different when compared to the initial implementation. Experienced users come to the table with a unique set of requirements, skills and frustrations. They have a sense for what is possible but may not have realized all the goals of the initial implementation. And, the business likely has changed.

The upgrade must be designed to take all of these factors into account and advance the organization's use of JD Edwards well beyond its current state. Therefore a unique upgrade methodology is absolutely critical.
